PREFACE.

THE present volume gives the title, size, price, number of volumes, publisher's name, and date of publication, of 67,500 distinct works—being the English publications, importations of original American works, and Continental English books, for the 28 years from January, 1835, to January, 1863.

The latest edition of the London Catalogue—now incorporated with this work—gave 42,340 works for the 25 years from 1831 to 1855; our additional researches have added to this number about 5300 titles which had escaped former compilers; from which, however, we must deduct 1500, omitted by reason of the four years' difference of date in commencement. This calculation leaves 21,360 books published during the last eight years, or an average of 2670 per annum, exclusive of reprints.

The chief feature of the present Catalogue is the addition of dates to every title, indicating either when the work was first published, or, if it was not originally published within the period embraced by this volume, the date of the last edition. In many instances both dates are given, as also the dates of alterations in the prices of the books. These dates were first introduced by the editor in his British Catalogue in 1849, and now uniformly adopted throughout, in the hope of approaching more nearly to his idea of what the English standard catalogue should be.

The old London Catalogue, together with the Brit sh Catalogue, has at very considerable cost been merged in the present publication; and for nearly three years past the time of the editor, and that of his assistants, has been thoroughly occupied in supplying deficiencies and correcting proofs. The great Catalogues of the British Museum have been carefully searched for every publication of importance not included in the two works just mentioned; and it is believed that a larger amount of information on modern English bibliography is thus brought together than has ever been presented in any similar work. The difficulties of the task will be readily appreciated by all who have had any experience of this kind of labour. The preparation of a Catalogue of any library or collection of books, however large, to which the compiler has access, is a comparatively easy task, or is at least one which depends only on the amount of personal attention and time bestowed, or on the extent of the staff of assistants at command. In the compilation of a Catalogue like the present, the labour is by no means so simple. It is often impossible to find a copy of works, which nevertheless must not be omitted; and the difficulties of establishing dates, and determining the publishing price and its changes, are often still more embarrassing.

It will be observed that none of the works published in 1863 are included in the present volume, which was, of course, in process of completion during that year. Some of those books might have been included; but the necessity was felt for terminating at some exact point of time, and it was thought better to omit the books of that year altogether, than to leave a doubt as to how far they were, or were not, included. It is proposed, however, to continue the publication of an Annual Catalogue such as that for 1863, already issued during the progress of this volume through the press. It is also purposed, at no very distant period, to continue the Index which has already been published from 1837 to 1855, from the latter period, this Index having been found especially useful.

It has been often said, that an Englishman will sacrifice everything to an idea; and were it not that the Editor is fortified on all sides by assurances he receives of the great need of the Dates, he would, upon considering what the present work has cost him, be filled with anxiety, lest it, too, should prove a sacrifice for an idea. This is the only alloy to the satisfaction he feels at the completion of his labours; but he clings to the hope, that the large amount of time and capital bestowed upon it will obtain for the New Catalogue the appreciation and approval of the public.

EXPLANATIONS.

Each Author's works published in a collective form, appear first under the authors—the detached works follow in alphabetical succession.

Classical Authors—in the original language first—followed by the translations.

Biographical works are generally under both the biographer and biographee.

Works of Fiction—where the authors are known—will be found under the author.

Appendix A.

Learned Societies, Printing Clubs, and other Literary Associations.

Appendix B.

Publishers' Collections, Libraries, Series, &c.

 The books contained in the Appendices A and B are also to be found in the Alphabet.

Appendix C.

Magazines, Reviews, and Miscellaneous Periodical Literature.

Appendix D.

Works first printed in any part of Continental Europe in the English Language, not being Reprints of British Publications.

 For this original list we are indebted to the kind research of Messrs. Asher & Co., of Berlin and London.
